MANUFACTURING PROFESSIONAL HONOR:
JOURNALISM AWARD INSTITUTION AS SOCIAL CONTROL IN CHINA

HUANG SHUNMING

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY
CITY UNIVERSITY OF HONG KONG
May 2011
Manufacturing Professional Honor:
Journalism Award Institution as Social Control in China
製造職業榮譽的象徵：
中國新聞獎制度的社會控制

Submitted to Department of Media and Communication 媒體與傳播系
in partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy 哲學博士學位

by
Huang Shunming
黃順銘

December 2010
二零一零年五月
Abstract

This dissertation investigates China’s journalism award institution and its practice from the perspective of social control. It makes a central argument that the party-state enacts social control over news people by manufacturing journalism awards within the institutional framework of state corporatism. State corporatism explains the top-down control over official journalism awards, characterized by the strong vertical interactions (between peak organizations and their local members) on the one hand, and the weak or even lack of horizontal interactions (among local professional organizations at the same levels) on the other.

The argument is elaborated as six dimensions: institutionalization, historical icon, opportunity structure, gatekeeping, ritual, and professional elites. Chapter 2 traces the history in which journalism awards were established as a formal institution of professional honor at the turn of the 1980s, alongside social transformation from the Maoist to post-Mao era. The clampdown on the democracy movement in 1989 marked a watershed, witnessing the tightening of control. Chapter 3 investigates how certain journalists were iconized as journalism awards. By placing these icons back into the historical contexts, the chapter uncovers the vicissitudes of their living and posthumous reputations, and their posthumous images constructed by the collective memory. Present-day news people neither identify uncritically with officially designated icons nor accept official professional interpellations at face value. Chapter 4 shows that official journalism awards have invented a set of institutional mechanisms to shape and manage the opportunities of professional honors, resulting in a particularistic type of opportunity structure. Chapter 5 performs a preliminary analysis of the gatekeeping practice. The judges sitting on the award committees are typically power-oriented and produce symbolic orders of honor that satisfy the propaganda authorities. Chapter 6 examines the ritual of official and non-official award ceremonies. Chapter 7 paints a quantitative portrait of the Changjiang & Taofen Award winners. Chapter 8 summarizes four basic social-control functions of journalism awards: indexing, purification, demonstration effect, and co-optation. It also reflects on three sets of relations revolving around journalism awards, to wit, press control and honorary control, journalism awards and journalistic excellence, and journalism award and media marketization.

In sum, official journalism awards in China represent a state-corporatist model of professional honors, distinctive sharply from such professional-community models as the Nobel Prize, the Pulitzer Prize, and the Academy Award.
Table of Contents

Abstract ................................................................................................................................................... i
Acknowledgements ............................................................................................................................... iii
Table of Contents ................................................................................................................................... v
Lists of Figures, Tables, and Photos ........................................................................................................ vi
Abbreviations ......................................................................................................................................... viii

Chapter 1  Social Control, State Corporatism, and Journalism Awards ......................... 1
Chapter 2  Institutionalization of Journalism Awards ................................................................. 27
Chapter 3  Historical Icon, Role Model, and Interpellation ....................................................... 48
Chapter 4  Opportunity Structure of Journalism Awards ............................................................ 77
Chapter 5  The Gatekeeper and Gatekeeping of Journalism Awards ....................................... 99
Chapter 6  Award Presentation Ceremonies as Ritualized Control ............................................. 122
Chapter 7  The Profiles of Official Professional Elites ................................................................. 142
Chapter 8  Conclusions, Reflections, and Unexplored Questions ............................................. 159

Appendix I: Interview Schemes ......................................................................................................... 183
Appendix II: The Pool of Informants ................................................................................................. 191
Appendix III: A Transcript Sample .................................................................................................... 194
Bibliography .......................................................................................................................................... 195
Lists of Figures, Tables, and Photos

Figure 1-1: Relations between state and social organizations in 20th-century China 9
Figure 1-2: Howard Wiarda’s theoretical spectrum of regimes 12
Table 1-1: Comparison between state and societal corporatism 14
Figure 1-3: State-corporatist Framework of official journalism awards in communist China in the 1980s 18
Figure 1-4: State-corporatist Framework of official journalism awards in communist China in the 1990s and beyond 19
Table 1-2: Basic characteristics of the pool of informants 26
Photo 2-1: The Freedom of the Press Award bestowed upon Qin Benli 29
Table 2-1: Some awardees of international journalism awards 30
Table 2-2: The result of national award rectification in 2005 42
Table 2-3: Sponsors and venues of the CJA in recent years (2000-2008) 46
Table 3-1: Labels bestowed upon Zou Taofen and Fan Changjiang 58
Table 3-2: Similarities and differences among the three centenaries 62
Table 3-3: Perceived reenactment of the Changjiang- or Taofen-like journalists 74
Figure 4-1: Institutional linkages of official journalism awards 80
Table 4-1: National-local difference in prize levels 94
Figure 4-3: Inter-media gap of opportunity in the 1980s 97
Figure 4-4: Inter-media gap of opportunity in the post-89 period 98
Table 5-1: Social origins of the three highest awards in China 104
Table 5-2: Social origins from local danweis on the three highest awards 105
Figure 5-1: Male judges on the CJA, by year 105
Figure 5-2: Time of service of judges on the CJA 106
Figure 5-3: Organizational diversity of two highest awards, by year 107
Figure 5-5: The evolving judging system of official journalism awards 110
Photo 6-1: Li Changchun meeting the prizewinners 126
Photo 6-2: Yu Huafeng bowing to the ritual participants 135
Table 6-1: Propaganda- versus professionalism-driven ritual models 141
Table 7-1: Gender distribution of the CTA winners and entrants 144
Figure 7-1: Mean ages of the Changjiang and Taofen winners, by year 144
Table 7-2: Age structure of the Changjiang and Taofen winners 145
Table 7-3: Age structure of the CTA winners and news people at large 145
Table 7-4: Ethnic distribution of the CTA winners 147
Table 7-5: Professional titles of female and male winners 151
Table 7-6: Professional titles of the Changjiang and Taofen winners 152
Table 7-7: Professional titles of majority and Han winners 152
Table 7-8: Professional titles of the CTA winners and losers 152
Table 7-9: Administrative posts of the CTA and Piaoping winners 154
Table 7-10: Administrative posts of the CTA and Piaoping winners 154
Table 7-11: Relationship between professional title and administrative post of the CTA winners 155
Table 7-12: Media types to which the Changjiang and Taofen winners belonged 155
Table 7-13: Media Ranks of the CTA winners 156
Table 7-14: Typical images of the Changjiang and Taofen winners 158
Abbreviations

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Full Name</th>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Full Name</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>ACJA</td>
<td>All-China Journalists Association</td>
<td>CCP</td>
<td>Chinese Communist Party</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>中華全國新聞工作者協會</td>
<td></td>
<td>中國共產黨</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CFJS</td>
<td>China Federation of Journalism Societies</td>
<td>CFJS</td>
<td>中國新聞學會聯合會</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CJA</td>
<td>China Journalism Award</td>
<td>CJA</td>
<td>中國新聞獎</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CPD</td>
<td>Central Propaganda Department</td>
<td>CPD</td>
<td>中央宣傳部</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CTA</td>
<td>Changjiang &amp; Taofen Award</td>
<td>CTA</td>
<td>長江韜奮獎</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NJEA</td>
<td>National Journalism Excellence Award</td>
<td>NJEA</td>
<td>全國好新聞獎</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SMDJA</td>
<td>Southern Metro Daily Journalism Award</td>
<td>SMDJA</td>
<td>南方都市報新聞獎</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>